There are many forms of Dementia.
Dementia is not a specific disease.
It's usually a group of symptoms.
Symptoms are normally progressive.
Many factors may cause Dementia.
Two or more brain functions impaired.
Can affect memory and language.
Can affect mood and motor skills.
Memory loss alone is not Dementia.
Normal daily activities become difficult.
May lose ability to solve problems.
May be unable to control emotions.
Personality may change, pro or con.
May become agitated, or wander.
May see things that are not there.
It is not widely considered a part of normal aging.
